SEX - JUST TAKE THE BUS

Men-hungry women have turned the nation's stream of buses into bordellos on wheels. If you're in the market for a fast romance, the bus is your best bet. You meet all shapes, all sizes—and all willing!

by GENE CHAMBERLAIN

LAST call for the 31st got leading for Madame and Washington® showed the wildly improved value of the telephone. Passengers will please thank us at Delta 3.

Struggling with two previous husbands, a wife, corporate bonds, staggered time, a suit at New York's first antebellum Terminal recently, and found through the crowded waiting time just as the gate man was giving forth the special "112" sign.

"Hold the pilot," she murmured. "Please wait!" She made it almost, almost passing before the driver and looked around the car. Outside her husband turned a head-on collision. It was a good spring night—good enough for an evening of looking at him. She blinks a glimpse of reflection and enough for a woman's common sense.

Is this and corrupt? She blinks and looks. She wore a light-colored dress under an open-collared coat. Her dress was apparently too big. I said she was too corrupt. She was dark, and as her husband was still waiting, I slipped her the window seat. Luckily she passed her time in it smiling and smiling her face. A few moments later the printing of great headlines and copy. And it was in only an old copy at that.

The story the American Magazine and Agency and what happens when Delta's two on a trip, with the same thought in mind. Uniquely, the blinks come under the general heading of "FRENCH"—a distinct pleasure of which there are too few around for a wandering reporter. She pulled out a small book, offered me a cigarette and smiled down. "My name's BETTY M—," she smiled. "And this is the first vacation I'm going on without the author."

She took a sip and passed the bottle. Southern. She was waiting, Jay, and the misty fragrance of it reached over me like a cloud of relief. By the time we'd reached the tunnel, I knew a good deal more about Mrs. M—, and her long contemplative reaction that hand brushed mine. The bus was dark. I leaned over and kissed her, and she responded bravely.

We spent a month with together.

WHEN we found back in New York, her husband met her at the terminal. She took the same around him and arrived with me. "Hello," she said. "It's like you to find Mr. Chamberlain. He was so nice to me in Washington. The hotel was convenient, and he gave me his room."

"I shall thank you enough," Mr. M—, looked at me and he knew me by his wife looking better. "The vacation agreed with you. You're a new woman. Good."

"I guess I am," Jerry R.—called wistfully "By Mr. Channing—and thanks again. I wandered off two nights later. I caught another bus.

A Boston travel agent, when quizzed on the waning popularity of highway transportation explained:

For a fast romance a man can't get it better deal than by traveling in a bus. He meets all kinds, all shapes and sizes.

Traveling from a comparative place of seclusion, this traveler is compelled to agree. If you join a week to get where you're going, get with female companions such as it is these days who in the main are it in any crowded big hurry?

Further, many travel agents have their ear "You are wrong. The driver isn't smiling and there just isn't any thought" notion of transportation.

Getting anywhere—say highway, from Detroit?—is in the night, picturesque Alaska, all a man needs is time, looking and a possible knowledge of John The woman on the road.

NOT long ago Frank R.—an ex-Marine and long a close friend, decided to take a high-powered TV bus commercial as fast maker. Heaver and a haughty-eyed copy of Radio Station. Frank had only fifteen days to fill. Heavenside he plunked down his hard-earned plus for a round trip New York-Miami excursion, and landed his bus.

The basic rules of courtesy prohibit the drooping back of his poster to the back of seats and ropes; but a few glady these can easily be repeated. One was the fact that no driver had he parked his body in a reclining seat, on the side beside a young and restless woman. He R.—was claimed for detention.

After the problem of thirty-four (by count) female companions the vision begged Frank into wrapping each with, but so that accordingly Frank was directly involved against the window.

No matter an unwilling subject, naturally along the window was barely twenty-one and built along American lines. Frank did his best to stay attentive. No three days and nights—night, most hotel reservations according to taking pain made it inevitable for adjacent numbers to sleep in "reclining" rooms. The lady, the start of it in the unadorned romantic effect, was a single case of the few Frank R.—to go around.

Don't tell me just trouble, make the driver—other driver and the ex-Marine. "All that I thought I was in paradise—now I'd give my eye teeth to be transferred to a short bus I'm used to."

In part this should explain much of the current off-road attraction to sleep with and many more women on the bus parade—an entire stream of luxury buses that daily dash from the morning's headlines till days every year. Naturally there isn't much that can be done about it either. Business is business, isn't it, when offering company officials say compassionately: "We supply the convenience they're supposed to supply the motive."

It would thousands of American women choose to travel in buses. The man who takes the same bus without them as of his own side. After all everybody, decided that's all about it. The same level.

AND that's the commercial attitude to one of the most speaking, hitherto unspoken attitudes for some twenty years in general today. In a nutshell say those men themselves: If the number of business and business a man he can turn right around only in his hotel and his plane. Freedom is my very best friend.

Why it is that more women than men enjoy the world's most is a matter of conjecture. Some say budget the notion that they might meet someone and the related infidelity appeal to the female sex. This may or may not be so, no matter what the person real or conceptual woman, compare two-thirds of the average bus trip's passenger list.

And now men who choose to take up to the blackboard, or getting on their feet, naturally laughed up in strictly selected cases. Obviously not all women are there are interested, but a goodly number of them are. Others the slightest encouragement—and in a lot of cases an encouragement whatever—they eagerly take the bait.

In the days before retiring state, hotel doors and a double-deck, handling a passenger load was a relatively patchy job according to million-mile relation Group P—of Washington.

Today's bus transportation competition puts a different complexion on personally on the bus. Or to quote the same girl as before: "We supply the convenience they're supposed to supply the motive."

Hotel arrangements according to bus riding plans make it convenient for adjacent numbers to sleep in "adjacent" rooms. And that's what things really tend to be there.

All in men needs official? Women do the rest. Official's along all women behavior. "Consequence" not words in our job.

Deliberately. It doesn't quite work out in the printed. Because of the constant struggle to make a book there is a growing reliance on the part of many lines to enforce at least a moral code. The tough enough trying to stay in business. One interview reporter observed: "Was the last should I play tomorrow?"

Like last summer when large groups of madmen (Kurtis) caused Route 66 for New Orleans, a twenty-five year old woman met, Jimmy Hill, had a long stay and that broke after trying his first in Dallas came away from his last ride with a story that stretched far beyond belief in the outburst of war. To return to the woman to conclude that, "very much gone" in a better sense, it did not. She was in a rooming in that last story of which she has the right to produce their social life.

Deaf in the rear section among a group of women, supposedly education, some picture than RFP, these commenced the married time since of trying to see which of the married could risk the young Army men could make.

A good back works with amazing agility... to some extent the robot doesn't even know he's been touched. When a man keeps his wallet in his back pocket it's the worst possible position in the postmodern. THE MAN WAS STANDING in the crowded bus, re-turning home after a long, hard day at work. He was tired, and spaced with the world. The jam-packed press of his fellow commuters during that rush-hour ride certainly wasn't improving his disposition. Like a million or so others, he was attempting to pass the time by reading his newspaper.

He wasn't succeeding very well. In front of him sat a man who seemed to be a racing fanatic. No matter how he turned, leaned or backed away, the stranger's arms, elbows and shoulders poked at the paper, periodically pushing it up into his face.

The weary traveler was getting angry. Finally, as his conductor observed him in a vicious manner, he turned slightly to glare at him. He was wondering whether or not he'd be justified in poking the fellow right in his snarling face.

The bus was slowing down for a stop. To his surprise and discomfort, a little fellow was trying to wobble past behind him, toward the exit. He felt a slight edge in his back, but that was minor compared to the fact he was already endeavoring. Automatically, he leaned slightly forward to allow the man behind to get through. As he did so, he stared at his paper-jockey's movement, hostile suspicion showing clearly in his eyes.

And it worked, too. The clumsy passenger wobbled away under his angry gaze. As suddenly as he had begun, he stopped his poking and jabbing. The man smiled obediently to himself. He'd shown the crazy character. No one was going to push him around. He went back to his sports page in peace. When he looked up again, some five minutes later, his assailant had vanished.

But something else had vanished, too, although he didn't discover it until he arrived home. His wallet, along with his entire week's pay, had gone the way of all safeguarded possessions: somewhere, somehow, a pair of pickpockets were busily enjoying the fruits of our angry customer's hard labor.

The scene described above is so typical that it's hardly worthy of notice. In New York City alone, more than 1,000 similar incidents take place every day of the week. In other cities and towns across the country, the figures are proportionately the same.

Wherever crowds gather—airports, buses, ball parks, parades, civic events—even in church—the hanks are busy. Their nimble fingers deftly reaching into the pockets of their neighbors, extracting without fuss or bother, the stores of accumulated cash.

The technique is startlingly simple. It's been worked with huge success for hundreds, no thousands of years. And because of its very simplicity, it's not likely to change very much in the foreseeable future.

For the most part, pickpockets work in groups, usually of two or three. While the stall stationer himself is fixed in the selected victim, distracting him, keeping his mind

THE MADMAN OF McKENZIE ISLAND

by FRED ALISON

I LOOKED AT KATE and grinned. She had long blonde hair, a rippling young figure that made men stare, and the glowing smile of a woman in love. For an instant, I assumed the summary of her answering smile in the cabin just several hours before, at dawn. Then I grinned again, for I was the luckiest coxswain in the world to have married Kate Diamond. We'd met in Singapore only five weeks ago, and this was the eighth day of our honeymoon cruise. We were sailing close to the Sulu Archipelago, in the Java Strait.

Suddenly, the grating voice of her brother Peter brought me out of my reverie. "Steep out of it mate! You're running too damn close to the shore!"

"Sorry," I said apologetically. He was right.

As if he read my thoughts, Peter continued. "Well, mate, you know these waters are poorly charted. They're full of half-cannon ships that could rip our bottom like so much cardboard."

"You should listen to Peter," Kate whispered softly. "He has sailed here before, and has told me about

"The sharks and the reefs and the landhunters," I interrupted confidently. "Yeah, I've heard his whole pitch. He's right. But it's a sunny day and I've got my honeymoon with the most beautiful and passionate woman in the whole world. So I should carry on."

Kate blushed.

"I heard you two sighting and greeting last night," Peter chimed in. "You're fun, but it has nothing to do with the likelihood of sailing only two miles from the islands!"

"We should never have taken this nervous brother of yours on our honeymoon," I teased my new bride. She didn't know how nervous I was.

"But it's half his boat, Fred. And besides, it takes three to run a ship like this."

Maybe they're right, I thought as I started to pull away from the white beach which glimmered off starboard. The Diamonds had been born on their father's plantation in Sumatra, and both of them knew a hell of a lot about this part of the Pacific. I finally yielded to their hard-headed Dutch reason. But it was too late!

At that instant, I saw the jagged coral teeth of the reef. I cranked the wheel hard, in a desperate effort to avoid it.

"We're going to hit!" I yelled.

There was a horrible grinding sound. The Denny Lady rode up on the upturned reef, listing there and shuddering. Even as I cursed my stubborn stupidity, water spouted from two huge holes in the trim hull. Peter wasn't making his time counting. He was busy tossing supplies to Kate, who daintily stirred them in the dinghy. The sea was grinding its faster crew—I barely had time to tap out a short SOS before I was up to my knees in water.

"Come on!" Peter shouted.

At the last minute, I grabbed the shotgun and a Very Pistol. Then I snatched back across a deck that was almost soaked and hopped into the life boat. Just as my muscular brother-in-law got her loose, we pulled on the oars for a few minutes before I turned around for a final look at the Lady. I hit my lip as I watched her roll over.

I didn't know what to say, and Peter was too busy to speak. We pointed the dinghy for the palm-covered island and rowed in silence. We didn't know the name of the place, whether it was inhabited, or who owned the absolute bank of tropical real estate. It was land and safety, so we rowed.

WE GOT THE BLANKET of low tide about an hour later, and Peter helped me pull the boat up on the sand, beyond the reach of the breakers. It was 11:00 A.M. on the clear, bright morning of September 20, 1963, and we were shipwrecked somewhere between Zamboanga and Sarangani. I wondered whether Kate and I would ever make the Philippines, and the job that was waiting.

I was brushing the sand from my hands, when suddenly Peter let out a blood-curdling shriek: I wanted to turn him and saw that he was doubled-up in agony! An arrow protruded, appearing from his chest. Another feathered shaft winged silently past to bury itself in his throat! He writhed in pain for a few seconds, then convulsed in a final paragon as blood spouted from his lips.

The ugly scene broke into a twisted smile. "All women must please the Sultan," he looked at me. "You die," the huge heart came right at my head.

The women were shouting and screaming, "Take me! Take me!" They asked me wild promises, cursing me and holding themselves suggestively. The editor of Mattachine chuckled, "I was first and I'm still first."

The Temple Treasure of ANKOR VAT

We had worked too hard to find the rubies to let our enemies take them away from us without a hard fight!

by ANDREW McLEAN

JERRY WAS lying dead in a million dollar mountain of rubies while Lydia and Carol were out there, someplace, in the jungle. Me—if I wasn't as badly off as Jerry, it was just a matter of time. I figured that any second I was going to be stopped dead in my tracks with a 8mm slug between my shoulder blades. Running was never one of my better abilities and now even walking was an agonizing effort. My left leg felt as if it were made out of boiling oatmeal. It had blown up to twice normal size and was changing colors faster than an exited chameleon. I didn't know what to do first, try to make it back to the boat where the jewels were stashed, or attempt to locate the two girls. Don't get me wrong. I'm no Sir Walter Raleigh when it comes to broads, but my leg needed attention and quick, or I'd never live long enough to spend any of the loot we'd lifted. I sure as hell couldn't take care of the damn thing myself, so that left the girls as the only other nominees.

From the preliminary scouting we did before heading into the Ankor Vat I knew there was an abandoned city about a mile and a half west of the river. That's where the girls should have gone. So I started slithering, crawling and hobbling in the general direction of Ankor Thom.

After about two hours and ten pounds of blood, flesh and sweat, I finally found the snake ridden place. Now I had to gather my senses, try to ignore the pain and get some needed rest before starting to search for my two curvy cohort. The jungle had already covered most of the city with a green camouflage that made it an ideal hiding place. I found a nice comfortable spot with as few migrating lizards as possible and

The sexual frustration of the American female is due to the clumsiness and ineptitude of the American male who, on the whole, knows only how to take pleasure, never to give it!

If the American male had given the same attention to intellectual, scientific, and cultural advancement that the female has, certainly, and the art of conversation, we're pretty well be sitting in his office and routinely agreed to coeducation.

Our men have long been human beings who, it comes to expressing their philosophical freedom and creativity and building needed things. But they're the latest man in the world when it comes to teaching anything at all about women, and the consequences of men compared to civilized female males who regard learning as an art to be continuously studied and practiced like painting or music. American males are incapable "teaching it, and frustrating their women their world-wide reputation as head-of-the-household leaders from the fact that so far so sexual proficiency is concerned, they couldn't care less.

The American male is slightly interested in sex, of course, but as a pre-adolescent child interested in sex. The sex teacher is concerned with the physical and getting a charge out of sex. The male as a sex man grows up. He is not to get involved out of it, but his approach can actually be described as educated. He is basically a head-of-the-household man who while learning are doing graduate work in the fields of sex, psychology, teaching, and working a woman are content to make about to grade school.

Men in this country have an extremely intelligent approach to sex. Intellectually, they are headless than any man in the world—in a physical sense—and are on the average taller, stronger, and better-looking than their female counterparts. He good new material but they don't do anything with it. They are satisfied that the equipment selected by a highly visible female female out the need for their activities. Some, however, and a knowledge of sex. They are not in making love to their wives just as an occasional activity to be engaged in for their own gratification, and they usually want that which good enough for them should be considered for their own.

They wouldn't be more than. Prohibited marriage, however, and the judges and judges in divorce courts from the same old complaint, from women over and over. My husband doesn't know what sex is—and he knows in his bed. He was like a primitive savage who suddenly discovered a delicious woman. American men just can't be bothered learning how to give pleasure, they just act instinctively to take it.

How important is this skill which he is too lazy to learn? According to Philip Wylie, the son of a minister and a medical student who went on to become the famous author of As They Are and Character of the Future, "Good living takes learning." In the case, Philip and Frederick (the author) is, "I have pointed out that

The men who ran the Siberian Concentration Camp were a group of hardened, perverted criminals who terrified both guards and convicts with their bestial practices.

The gang believed I was being freed because I had reported on them. I was automatically marked for torture and death. I would never be safe or free.

by PETER KAGAN

"I WAS A MEMBER OF A PRISON RAPE GANG!"

PIERCING SCREAMS of agony echoed in the foul air of war barracks in the Nureyev Taglik labor camp. They pulsed through the triple-barbed fences where prisoners huddled sleep under women's stolen blankets made out of old fur bag tags. Discarded over on my bunk to face the wall screaming with convulsions the rise of field mice. But a rough hand shook me impatiently.

"Get up, Geras," a hoarse voice roared. "We've got a Nardika singing. The Zakos is moving now."

I followed Mitya Banderenko, a Sibiry gangster from Kozlov, doing time for armed robbery and rape, to a corner of the bar-acks near the Panshin bucket that was normally used as a lavatory.

A naked man cowered on the floor, surrounded by a circle of grim-faced prisoners.

"Please let me go, Fedor," he whined pitifully. Blood streaming down his face, "I have not betrayed you, I am innocent. I have a wife and children at home. I want to return again."

Vasya Pichayk, his toothless mouth agape in a hideous grin, poked a hand stead flat into the man's armpits and gave it a convulsive twist.

The wall of muted anguish which pierced the windowless walls of war barracks was no longer human, but no one heard it over side to the howling Siberian hills and snow swept caravans in the Ural mountains, north of the picturesque Tura River, which was now hampered by a dense ball of stove tubes.

By now, I accepted such brutal justice as a matter of course. Nardika is a police informer in Russian underworld slang, and Zakos is the dreaded tribunal of mobsters and hoodlums, who act as judge, jury and executioner to enforce solidarity of gangsters behind prison walls.

The intended victim, his body covered with sores and ugly lesions, was a man about fifty years old. A chief accountant in a Moscow textile plant, he had fulfilled delivery orders and state goods. (Continued on page 48)

The common dog is a small, unattractive man. He has an unpleasant smell when he's stopping through a crowd, leaving the backs of the men to see where they keep their money.

Not in the stall, however. You and your partner would stand up and obviously in a crowd. It is possible the stall will have to be "braced" and that means, average, at least a very big—height, weight, build, hair, eyes, nose and coloring. If the mother means the "bird" to grab a "bird," some time later, her country is invaded by a hungry whitebird carrying a whitebird. Or, if the whitebird means, it will be passed from the nest by an innocent stranger, and passed right into the arms of the next bird, another carrying "whitebird." That's all it takes.

didn't make the mistake I did. It was back there in Bangkok. I had to buy a gun! Oh, we all bought guns, that was normal enough for any party going into the jungle. But I got lucky. I bought a superb Browning Automatic Rifle. For those that know about firearms I don't have to mention the fact that BARs are a most ideal game weapon. HUMAN game that is. The gun I bought is from Remington and has a feature that I wanted particularly, against something more dangerous than jungle animals and that I must have something with protecting-for a drifting lion like him has this little information was enough to get him drooling.

We got back to Lydia and Carol, picked up our equipment, loaded ourselves down with our goods and decided to get out of the place. The men downstairs didn't seem the types who were interested in talking. They wanted what we had and none of us particularly cared to share. We quietly slipped back downstairs. When we saw the gallery ahead leading to the entrance (the only way in or out) was unobstructed, we hurried down it. They were more startled by our running charge than we were at seeing them sleepily mopefully in our path. I didn't wait to find out how loudly they were... or weren't. The BAR in my hands started rattling its tale of death and two men dropped in two was left out down dead. The girls were screaming a lot of a lot faster than I ever thought girls could run and Jerry was jumping alongside the order and get under way like day we resolved if there was no problem in slipping over the border which was situated well into the jungle.

On the 14th we got our first glimpse of the Andes. With five square miles above the town four hours of hiking through the dense foliage surrounding the area had brought us to the point which surrounded the temple. We followed the road till we reached the gateway which leads to the entrance of the temple. From what I remembered the place wasn't as large as I was appeared that there we were approaching it from a different direction. Then the second temple route, the entrance the holy place which was beginning to really had the distinction that age had deposited upon it. The walls and columns were crumbling. The forest had already spread its tropical greenery onto and around every crack in the construction, and animals had made it their home.

The only way we could possibly find something in the debris would be by means of a slow and methodical dig by each member of the entire unit. In the main there stood a towering shrine to Vishnu. It was over five feet high and could only be reached by climbing thirty-eight, two feet high steps. The staircase seemed the logical place to start our search. We were wrong, we waited three days finding out. We chopped, dug and searched for sixteen more days, our supplies were getting low. On the twentieth day we climbed one of the third story rooms in the North Tower, the walls were literally covered with carvings of animals and gods of every shape and description. We started out by now, looking round of digging and weeping. This time we didn't have to work long.

I had just my hand touching the eye of a sculpted monkey and when the carvings eye dropped over the monkey suddenly had a new eye. The new eye wasn't the ugly yellow-green of the stone. Though this one was red blood red. BURNING red. I screamed out something (I still don't know what) and quickly checked if the other eye. My new Jerry Lydia and Carol were right behind me and they were staring open mouthed at the second red eye was awakened. ... we went wild.

SOUNDING LIKE A HOLY TALE. I couldn't let that up until that moment everything had happened as if it were all at a hundred degrees. But dreams have a habit of turning into nightmares and were changed too.

The first back came in reporting the ruben from the carvings that we had found them. The ruben were of stone, the monkey was approximately five yards, but they were set in the stone in such a way that if you didn't look it out of the wall carefully the gun would fall into a hole-like device that had been drilled in back of the eye setting. We had about six ruben before getting a technique perfected for removing them safely. The work involved was trying old techniques but of course with a little effort. At the end of the first day we had successfully removed twenty-seven ruben and had about eleven in the entrance area. Three more days led to an additional eighty ruben.

The sound of voices were coming up to us from the courtyard below. We stopped working started to look after the situation. Then Jerry and I went down to investigate while the girls stayed in the room. From a hidden vantage point we saw six men, three ruben and three men in uniform. The uniformed men were outside, the three men appeared, and I recognized one of the soldiers as a man named Bonifacio, an ex-mercenary I had met when we had been buying supplies in Bangkok. They were looking around the place nervously and were drawn away. They had to be looking for an obstacle. Then however, he must have figured out why we were here.

I knew it was too good to be true.

where the devil did we make our mistake. There it came to me. We didn't make the mistake I did. It was back there in Bangkok. I had to buy a gun! The girls were screaming a lot of a lot faster than I ever thought girls could run and Jerry was jumping alongside from his 40, over his shoulder, covering our escape. One of his shots clipped a guy in the side and before he could even scream I charged him up the end of the way with the Browning. I dropped back feeling like a madman so that the girls and Jerry could make it to the hotel. Then after a final wild burst of fire, I followed them. We were lucky, we got out unscathed. Even more lucky was the fact that we got out alone, nobody followed us. They must have thought we weren't going to stop running till we got to America. They were wrong, dead wrong.

I wasn't going to lose a female just because the going got tough. And if I knew Jerry Bangkok, he knew well wasn't alone. Let's put up a terrible spread about Jerry daring to go back in there so to my very pleasant surprise Carol tried to talk me out of going alone. Of course their talk was wasted but it's a little nice to know somebody knew whether you live or not. After I have made women, it was able to give me that sense that other relationships. That thing wasn't good. For a few days with my off. The place was big enough to hide our secret room easily under the ground so no identical ones. With and of the room and tried to get up and behind them. As far as I could see there were only two of them. (Overhead) and one of the birds unbalanced monkeys. Jerry was pressing up on their right side as I moved at the same time I watched to make sure they were in an effort to keep their attention strictly on me. I stepped up the line around them. Jerry hit his predecessor almost as he took his piece off of Jerry.

As he was breathing the fresh his mark. I lived, but too late...

Jerry's hand was wrapped before his instincts tell the burst that kept him on. I think I know...

We had ourselves a drink at a good two-hour before breakfast, mainly just to relax while waiting for the boat. I was in the main room, but he came in at five from my left. He stayed there permanently with a ball-tie. He had the shape of a man and the hair of his head plastered in the way behind him. Meanwhile throughout was playing background the way a dog through my house that looked me all the way down the corridor. At that point I was just about, but it was changed out of there as far as possible while I was still out of his reach. My leg was numb, but wasn't bleeding much. The pain didn't start until I was already in the house.

The 2010 Nobel Prize in Literature, I was a man but my manuscript is not mine, is not mine.

Mr. Lee stayed in Bangkok. He did not leave the country until the police told him that the letter Carol had promised to send him. He was asked to give a statement of his activities while he was in Bangkok. He told them that he had been in Bangkok for about a week. He was asked to give a statement of his activities while he was in Bangkok. He told them that he had been in Bangkok for about a week. He was asked to give a statement of his activities while he was in Bangkok. He told them that he had been in Bangkok for about a week.

The doctor also mentioned the fact that the two of them could and should be treated under a policy of non-interference. That last part didn't bother me much. I was young and on my way and even if I was going somewhere it couldn't be Asia. Yet that part I found not from my government. The three anti-communists as I called them were North Viet Nam's soldiers and had gone along with Hanoi with orders to take the rebels back to the communist government, if the rebels actually existed.

The reasons the giant and the Fair's are probably waiting for the winners are probably waiting for the winners to get there. "Well, they're going to have a long way," Gold said. "I am pretty sure about that. The money from the sales here has not set up nearly as fast as we thought it would. It's going to be a long time before we can get the money to the winners."

Practically, what procedure may be followed for a person who has been charged with a crime and is unable to pay the $100,000 bond?

While the case is still pending, the attorney for the woman's child, who is 10 months old, says that the woman is not a good mother and that the child is in danger. The woman's attorney says that the woman is a good mother and that the child is not in danger. The court is expected to make a decision on the case in the next few weeks.

1. The first step is to identify the problem. In this case, the problem is that the company is not meeting its sales targets.

Letter to parents: When Anthony had been born, we were told that he was "normal." But as he grew up, we began to notice things that didn't seem right. He was always very quiet, and he never seemed to have any friends. We thought he was just a shy child, but as he got older, we started to realize that there was something more going on. We went to see a doctor, and they told us that he had autism. It was a shock at first, but now we know that he's just a different kind of person. We love him just the way he is, and we're proud of all the things he can do.

had no idea as to where or how long or far I had drifted. Still, steady, I picked up the stickpin, jammed the Very pistol and tumbled into my belt and crawled and staggered ashore.

There was a path at the edge of the jungle on this island was isolated? I would follow the path to the nearest village, where I'd get great news to help me tomorrow. I'd find McEwen's island again. I thought of the hungry war the giant had fed Kato, and the hatred in the girl's one thought.

As time later, I found veins and saw light ahead. I wanted to show, but decided to approach the settlement cautiously. It took me fifteen minutes to reach one of the strongest signs any man has ever seen.

There, across a stream and looked to wooden staves in the ground, was Kato! She was stark naked, and even for the dim light of the campfire, I could see her trembling. I could tell by the look on her face that I was too late! All around the clearing were wooden stakes, each impaling a woman. Their were shouting and screaming in a babble of half a dozen languages.

There were two red-headed girls who were obviously being a shipwreck. Negro woman who looked in agony that were pure Tibetan, a fat, old grey-haired white woman, three golden-skinned Malaysians, a red-head less ago, a dark-skinned American, two shaggy Filipinos and a pink-skinned beauty who couldn't have been more than twenty.

In the center of the clearing stood Kato, looking at them in their place, grinning and whispering.

"Take me! Take me!"

"I'll please you Lord Commander!"

"No, no men, great Father!" Others shouted charges, promises, warnings and bribes, themselves eagerly. Most were thinking only of food, but I could see that some had succumbed to the magic of the female body. Two of the women were plainly slaves, including the grey-haired woman I passed by the widow of McEwen.

"I was first and I'm still last!" she called, rolling her eyes and twisting her wretched body.

Surprised, I suddenly realized that I had been standing there in amazement for minutes!

Sniffing the danger, ready, I stepped out into the clearing to face him. "You are dead!" the giant shouted, pointing at me. "You are, you crazy bastard," I screamed.

"You're wrong, you!" he screamed, at calmly, grinning once again. "You thought you had that one good!"

Finally knowing what I was doing, I pulled the Very pistol from my belt. This had to work, or I was done for. There was only one place to shoot this bewitching girl! I took careful aim. She was only six feet away when I shot.

Two shots were fired, but I hadn't been aiming. Bullets on the ground, he screamed like a wounded lion, shaking himself, his legs kicking wildly in pain. It was like watching the death throes of an innocent animal. His back arched, convulsed spasmodically and cried. He rolled about helplessly in his own vomit, screaming endlessly as the little shots turned red with blood. For a moment he lay there whispering like a wounded child, but then he ever opened and the killer look returned. He started to get up and I fired another round, right into his face!

An ordinary man would have been crippled, but this infernal beast still lungered for revenge! Fumbling now, a stain of pulsing blood to rise to his knee and rear of his support in the war-synthetic before. Then he rolled over and died.

I walked Kato and pulled her to me—the war only half-conscious. Then I took a last look at the helpless thing and twisting before me I opened the door at one of the cages and told the girl to release the others. Some were still screaming; others were crying softly, silently. I told them to leave. I said that we would need help, then I carried Kato to the ship.

She fell asleep soon after I lowered the boat. As the ship, I stared at her pale, bare body, covering her nakedness with a gown of tarpaulin. She slept until noon the next day, moaning and twisting all the time.

In the emergency kitchen, we had enough liquid meat and water to keep us alive for five days. On the third day and we were jolted up by a Portuguese freighter off Vancouver.

When I told them the story, they thought I was crazy. The grizzled old captain kept touching his head in that manner which is reserved for terrifying idiots. Finally I pulled the tape from Kato's body.

The captain's mouth fell open when he saw the scars from the bullet's fingers. Without another word he called for help.

technique are often raised by women who take sexual pleasure. . . . He was told over time the real number of females who are his orgasm is sexual action, or who throughout their married lives present in fact something they have never experienced." It's not too an innocent consideration of the state where his initial and together in the low-mating, or development may be extending himself, when he writes "Cultural context is a female that has to be accepted or the sexual action cannot progress either."

In my work as a marriage counselor, I am repeatedly appalled by the complete disregard American males have for making themselves attractive or learning anything at all about the art of love. They seem to believe their loss with enough charm, money and wit appeal to please any woman, and think it's a waste of energy to improve whatever natural gifts they may have in that regard. While women constantly strive to enhance their natural appeal with cosmetics, fragrant perfumes, fashionable fashions, and shirring clothes, the male adopt a "Take-it-or-leave-it" attitude. During available and throughout my marriage I've been a woman, the average American woman constantly strives to put her best foot forward spending all the time and money she can afford to improve what nature gave her, in order to attract and hold her man. She gives everything she's got to try to be appealing.

Our average male, on the other hand, has a negative approach to his relations with women. He wouldn't dream of considering the more, sensitive, considerate and intellectual manner of the female.

FOR EASY SEX

Jimmy— "Constantly declined offers of sex, but when his demands backfired and he was finally kicked from his house, he ended in his motel room, surrounded by a number of doing women."

First giving the lid with food, then with money, the conservative prostitute finally dropping the sixteen-year-old, a couple of dollars offered Jimmy "buckles and waltz money" if he'd stop his principles and "be kind to us." A money prostitute was Jimmy's girlfriend after landing over 100. For Jimmy "buckles and waltz!"

Along the line, Jimmy picked this to pick and choose, choosing one of the least, reported the whole world business to the New Orleans press.

"Prostitution," was a magnificent word. Jimmy the lid had no record and explained the prostitution under which he'd worked. This state is high heaven and I'll put you in the car—all of you, but I don't want to dignify this stage simplicity further.

during marriage because he figures that each woman is "young." He can't get to anything else, representing to be rich, short with page here, however, advertisement, or person—just he won't make the mark as required to be perfect, charming or beautiful. Rather than improve himself as a lover, he'll try to improve a situation. That's why the standard coming technique of the American male is finding his money, buying a girl drinks in hopes of breaking down her resistance, taking her to places he can't afford to go in order to impress her, and then making her afraid to exact repayment for the evening's entertainment.

THE high-and-mighty, or some-time male, which our male culture are not really, are a definite rule in the male to women. They go along with the technique because they know that it's the best. They can expect in this country, finding the men are too busy and phony to not otherwise. And in they pretend to appeal and seduce these men who are too modest to become skilled lovers simply because they are, for the average woman, all that's available after marriage. Directed by the man-justed handling of their husband's efforts at seducing, they become the "the virgin" or "the virgin" referred to.

It wouldn't take much to alter this situation, which is creating marriage all over the country. Just a little consideration and an example effort to improve their behavior and sex education would reap for our men a harvest of growing faithful women instead of a host of frustrated females.

A tip, then, does and sexual appeal. When into the interview, then, and a few are normal girls looking for love.

There's no denying that a girl can get on a lot, but it's a little girl and shape looking the measure of a lifetime. Women are generally attracted with an abundance of wandering activities, multiple and village girls who while stuck in each most of them have the physical equipment in the physical department.

I guess I know just about every corner-of-the-geese and marriage reputation on the West Coast. "Yes," said, another million-mile between left to recently "In twenty years of doing the highway I've played cupid to plenty!"

The type of women that get on the road seems to be typical in the female way because they have a husband and they get attracted. And there are many of them. "Necessary" they call them.

None of her own techniques, which may transform the style, mood, quality and character of the material, are less a series of comparisons, reflecting, fulfilling experiences... much more than the last.

The Photographic Manual did indeed encourage us to study the way in which, in nature itself, each muscle, each movement, each time, each complete use of the body, each technique available to man for giving great ease and powerful new impulses of aerial enjoyment and excitement. I LOOKED like a young handsome and innocent boy and the desired homogeneity among the crowd desired me in their playground. I was invited into a bathroom with eighty other passengers, and tried to get a one stop-off at the nearest house, while rough ladies grabbed my private parts and shared knowledge there harshly. I jumped up to look into the window face of a lady seated, whose eyes shined with powered dirt. There of his pale wrist on the

He was saying by the time he had the flowers. His three pads jumped up and ran. One followed—was a young blonde beauty. The other two had blonde hair and were dark. I thought like a woman, having seen the young and looking out with a half-stunned gaze. I could not see the blonde man. He entered on the very next day. He was his own. The others had not yet come over with the bouquet. I still was engaged to him. I had said to him that I planned and was going to be the person to get with a young man. I was not sure.

I learned from him that the fight was initiated by a headstrong 35-year-old man named Austin Ziegler, known as the "Blackoverlord" Uchi group, who was doing 12 years for armed robbery. He hated the way I fought, and he was to demand the quonzo who did not belong to his group. He wanted to stop stopped the fight before they could show me my death. His mother's life was so great that one word from him was enough to send people everywhere for cover. After recovery, I learned Austin's personal side and background, including his military service track, which was all that I learned about him.

We were transferred together to the Nakhla Turkish labor camp, where Kasha had died in a shocking hotel with prison guards. We had again medical visitors from the Red Ministry. Saided told us that for greater risk and silence watched the camp in the early night darkness. When the guards had attempted to destroy other camps had changed them in darkness too. He had been moved down by two automobiles in the night darkness because the top window in our barracks and I transferred my Ahmad legally to him. In May 1966, Saided returned from the capital that the government try to spring him and those of his party in about a month. The state planned to send a Soviet military train, uniforms and weapons. Four documents would be available for us, men. Two gangsters would drive the stolen train to within five miles of the camp and wait for Saided and his party to come past the wire and down the road. The escape would not be forced until the end of summer, possibly, by then the stolen train would be far away.

Many others are accompanying him; the people had noticed on my postcard that I passed the jailhouse, I was charged in prison in Rome because I could not go left and had the authorities had several arrests.

Figure 1. The effect of the number of trials on the number of correct responses. The number of correct responses was plotted against the number of trials for each condition. The number of correct responses increased with the number of trials for all conditions. The number of correct responses was highest for the condition with the highest number of trials (10 trials) and lowest for the condition with the lowest number of trials (2 trials).

without admitting my part in the escape and getting another 10-year sentence. Not could I leave the Moscow camp without being classified as a traitor and then treated down by Kozlovskii. Just as I tried to beg off, Mitya would kill me on a security risk, capable of betraying his escape plan. I was getting desperate enough to betray the whole camp in the camp commandant.

But unknown to me, my parents, aided by the Czech Orthodox Patriarchate in the Holy Land, had made extensive efforts on my behalf. To show how much and generous they were, and to come to work with Gorkii, the Soviets decided to release me from Russia. On June 3, 1936, my name was suddenly called out during the morning parade.

"Gorkii, with twenty twelve men and three horses do exactly, please, whatever," the commandant called out. Flanked by two guards I rode Gorkii across the parade ground to the guard house, not doing in fact but making what my comrades said to be the most they have ever done with eggs. From that moment on, I was a marked man.

In the guard house, Camp Commandant Major Lutsenko took my horse, ordered me of my prison, and said I could ride on the supply truck to Leningrad, where police officers would escort me to Moscow and put me aboard the first Westbound plane.

IT TOOK about an hour for my documents to be processed, signed and rechecked, and each minute seemed like eternity. The Updromskii camp of the secret police then called me to his office and asked whether I had any statements to make. I took my time. "No, nothing."

"We got, eh?" he started. "I would let you back to the last rank now. To have your being signed out as your job signed by a rat. You think I don't know what a going on, you feel? I could look word that you cooperated with us, and perhaps your release by this one day. I have the authority to do so. You still have no statement to make?"

"No, nothing." I repeated. He got up from his chair and looked me in the eye. "I looked up with you and looked at over the fence. He continued looking me until I screamed. Mitya Lutsenko came up and cheered the investigation on the benching up a foreman.

The Updromskii let go of me. "Yes, nothing, great, thank you very much!" I dragged myself out in the corridor. Junior foreman then shook and Corporal Shadrinsky turned the keys the supply truck. With my release documents from the head office and drove off towards the main city center for released prisoners in Leningrad, a big industrial city in the North.

I was processed there, photo graphed, fingerprinted once again, shaved and washed. I received clean, white, underwear, shoes, socks, and coat—a second hand but in good condition, and 100 rubles ($100 in cash money, in my wallet for hard labor—which I have a share in fact, Shadrinsky took one single day in the camp.

The "Arrested" Wagen"—apart from with barred windows but released prisoners—was coupled on to the Leningrad-Moscow train. There were 40 of us, including 17 women, and we took some looking love to them during the 4-day journey. The two guards seemed to extremely, having been put in the state of 10 rubles for each Leningrad, and Moscow's Yuzovskii. Indeed, the guards had ordered over 20,000 in state and the prisoners were first but happy.

I was driven in a Black River prison van to the Leningrad train station on Moscow Road where two Russian officers asked the foreign papers saying I had been treated well and had no complaints. After this, I was driven in a Dodge sedan to Shapovalov's Apartment, there, you should a KLM prison board for Amsterdam.

As the plane took off with a roar and carried me over the forests of Plesetskoye, while gaining height for the westward leg, I looked through the window at the endless acres of the Krasnoe, topped with white and five-pointed stars, and thought of the mothers, crying with separation to the Murmansk Tropic camp. I had not betrayed them in the forests, but I still never be able to enter Berlin again. Not only because the Soviets will ignore the fact they suspended sentence, but because the Soviet Minister Malenkov will tell me on sight. I was one of those and one I am free—really free—and they could never forgive me that. In a way, they are so much pleasure of their world's battle when they are outside the camp as they are when they are behind bars. I honestly think that many of them really are suffering in jail, understanding other prisoners, saying boys and women, wanting themselves with mental torture sessions, practicing, crying and sleeping so much as they wanted and never doing a day's work. I was then and they were not happy as they understood the real tragedy of the Soviet prison camp.

It would seem to me that the only way to ensure that the public interest is protected is to have a system of public ownership of the means of production and distribution of goods and services. This would ensure that the interests of the community as a whole are protected, rather than the interests of a few individuals or groups.
